

Once again, the FCC is being pressured to make decisions that will negatively affect consumers. Satellite radio is a unique and superior product when compared to over the air broadcast, and will eventually supplant fm and am as the predominant sources for the consumer. Their rights should be no different than those of the cable companies who regularly offer local information. Do not pass legislation that will be detrimental to consumers who are invested in this product.